

Editor's note: The following is the second of a three-part series by Bruce Ullman, staff writer, concerning the campus parking situation and subsequent growth in the use of bicycles.

by BRUCE ULLMAN

An outgrowth of the ecology movement and the campus parking situation is the bicycle. The bicycle "happened" at this campus about two years ago, according to Executive Dean Douglas Gerard. At that time, the on-street parking was ended for Perimeter Road and the bike routes were painted in.

The face of the campus has undergone considerable peopleand bicycle-oriented change since then. A total investment thus far of $7300 in bicycle racks has provided 1300 parking spaces for the two-wheelers, or about one space for every two bikes. This, of course, does not include the "unofficial" parking spaces that clever students think of for their machines, such as banisters, signposts and trees.

There was no official fund for bicycle parking, according to Budget Officer Joe Surra, so the money had to be eked out of other budgets, mostly from the parking lot maintenance fund. Surra said that after a study is made of how effectively the existing racks are placed to handle the volume of bicycles, some of those racks may be moved and new racks added.

When the architecture students bricked-over the portion of Inner Perimeter Drive adjacent to the library for Poly Royal, 1971, the school bought 37 new bike racks for $1800. Eventually, all of Inner Perimeter Drive is to be converted into a people and bicycle mall, according to Gerard.

With the great increase in bicycle traffic on campus, the frequency of break-downs is bound to go up.

There is a comradery among "bikers." A student had thrown the chain off his machine's rear derailleur mechanism. As the apparent layman stood there, trying to figure out how to get his bike running again, another student walked over and offered to help him. The helper said he worked in a local bike shop and that there was nothing seriously wrong with the bicycle.

After turning the bike upside-down, the mechanic deftly draped the chain back onto the gears as he cranked the pedals. He then made a few adjustments to the derailleur and righted the bicycle. Before the rider could leave, though, the mechanic noticed that the front quick-release hub was improperly fastened and quickly set it right. No money changed hands.

New dining complex nears completion

NEW DINING HALL

New choice in student dining

Students tired of eating in the same old Snack Bar and Burger Bar will soon have a new option in dining choices with the opening of the new dining complex Winter Quarter.

ASI puts stop to late budget

The Finance Committee met last night and decided that budget deadlines must be met this year.

This year the Finance Committee agreed that no ASI budgeted groups will be allowed to turn in their 1973-74 budgets after the due date of February 1.

According to Mike Meiring, head of Finance Committee, 60 percent of the groups turned their budgets in late last year. As a result it hampered the committee in determining the overall ASI finance demands.

Budgeted groups must put in their 1972-73 final budget breakdown of allotted - ASI expenditures within the next two weeks. The entire ASI breakdown of budgets will be presented to

Phillips said the million dollar complex is nearing completion. The dining hall is named Sierra Vista and is located between Yosemite Hall and the red brick dorms.

According to Phillips the dining facility is divided into two separate arrangements and will accommodate 750 persons per meal. "One side has a scramble cafeteria like the College Dining Hall and the other has a restaurant," Phillips said.

The restaurant has 130 table settings, 17 counter spaces and banquet facilities for 48. A distinctive feature of the dining hall is the art gallery located at its entrance.

A second building project nearing completion is the new dorm, Sierra Madre. Phillips said Sierra Madre will open Fall Quarter, 1973, and house 600 students. Its design approximates that of Yosemite Hall.

According to Executive Dean

Douglas Gerard there is one major improvement in the design of Sierra Madre over Yosemite dorm. He said "We have put better sound proofing between the room walls so students no longer hear their neighbors everytime they open the cupboard door."

Upon completion of the Sierra Madre dorm total on-campus housing will be 1926 spaces.

Four Items scheduled for SAC

Tonight's abbreviated Student Affairs Council (SAC) agenda contains only one business item and three discussion items. This tentative agenda was subject to change at yesterday's SAC Workshop.

Under business items, SAC will make a decision on the status of Glenn McCullough as Publisher's Board chairman. McCullough has appeared before SAC twice during its first three meetings without being approved. Some question remains as to the legality of McCullough's election as chairman last year. Several of McCullough's actions as last year's Publisher's Board chairman also are under scrutiny by SAC. Investigation into this matter has been taken by SAC and a decision should be made tonight.

The three discussion items on the agenda include: the instructor requirement description discussed at last week's meeting, code revisions and city-wide bussing.

According to ASI Pres. Robin Baggett, he will present, as part of his officer's report, ASI auditor Tom James from Lund and Guttery, Certified Public Accountants. Mr. James will answer questions from the SAC representatives and members of the audience about the ASI budget.

Baggett to control state College leaders' budget

Robin Baggett was elected controller of a $20,000 budget for the California State University and Colleges Student Presidents Association. (CSUCSPA)

Baggett was chosen from seventeen state-campus leaders at the October 15 meeting of the CSUCSPA in Fresno

Baggett said that he felt honored to be elected to the position and that his experience on the finance committee and helping to draw up this year's budget on campus helped him win the election.

Baggett explained the controller's responsibility as being to collect and dispense the association funds, do financial reports, go to the state Board of Trustees meetings, and do yearly audits. The controller also handles salaries within the association such as that of Joe Hay, legislative advocate.

The CSUCSPA creates its budget from dues paid by all state campuses which are members of the organization.

McGovernite rebukes

Editor:

Your hazy thinking as expressed in your anti-McGovern editorial will never cease to amaze me. First, I really find it hard to believe that you were unbiased when you went to hear Senator McGovern. I've had too many dealings with you to believe that you are able to shed your biases any more than I can shed mine. It is fairly obvious that you were prisoner to your bias when you wrote your editorial.

It is interesting (and unfortunate) that you are guilty of the same tactic you accuse Sen. McGovern of using. You claim that Sen. McGovern's basic argument was 'Nixon is corrupt, so vote for me.' Yet you use this exact same approach by saying "McGovern is bad, so vote for Nixon." If McGovern is therefore obsessed with tearing down the opposition what does this say for the Mustang Daily?

Perhaps we should look at what Senator McGovern did say. He again challenged Richard Nixon to come before the people, not really an unreasonable request in a democracy. He challenged Nixon's spokesmen to show that his Vietnam plan would not bring the troops home and end the killing, rather than making vague statements about national dishonor. He wants to end illegal wiretaps and government corruption that benefits large corporations, such as certain grain dealers, to the detriment of the American consumer.

The Mustang Daily could be a little more credible if they rationally discussed issues, rather than engaging in rabid mudslinging. I'm sure most readers would find it rather more appropriate.

'Blood donators have maintained my hope'

Editor:

During the past six months I have become very grateful to a great number of un-named and un-identified students and faculty members here at Cal Poly. On February 24, 1971 I came down with leukemia which required a great amount of donated blood to carry out the necessary treatment. The treatment was successful and I am now in what is called a total remission.

Well over 300 units of blood were necessary to keep me alive until the full remission was realized. All of these units of blood came from two blood drives held on this campus.

Dr. Mounts of the Health Center termed these blood drives as the most successful at Cal Poly not only for the 100 per cent completion, but for the well organized and efficient work of volunteers who donated their time. Several individuals and groups were responsible for this success; John Durante, Dr. Victor Buccola, Dr. Robert Mott, Dr. Mounts, C.A.P.H.E.R., Block "P", and the Tri-Counties Blood Bank.

As a result of the successful therapy which requires these blood drives, I am back in school to complete the course of study that was so rudely interrupted last February. My doctors are sure that I will graduate and receive my masters degree. They are also hopeful that a cure will be found during my remission.

Without the donated time and blood of volunteers here at Cal Poly there would be no help. I am very grateful and thankful that these people have helped me maintain hope.

Pettas, Robinson awarded Player of Week honors for Fresno game

by JERI TOMSON

As the Mustangs finished their hard-fought Fresno game to a tie last weekend, two players stood out in the coaches' minds.

UPI Rankings

1. (tie) Delaware 5-0
1. (tie) Louisiana Tech 5-0
3. North Dakota 6-0
4. McNeese State 4-1
5. Western Illinois 6-0
6. MUSTANGS 4-0-1
7. Tennessee State 5-1
8. Drake 4-1
9. Fresno State 4-1-1
10. Boise State 5-1

Quarterback John Pettas, Offensive Player of the Week, made impossible plays a reality. Pettas scored the first time in the game for the Mustangs on a keeper from the Fresno seven. On a fake kick later in the game, he passed 26 yards to Mike Thomas to go ahead in the contest, 24-17. Pettas ran well and rolled up 102 yards rushing by the end of the game. The senior physical education major also completed six of eleven passes for 66 yards and one touchdown. A two point conversion run by Pettas in the second quarter tied the score for the first of three times in the game.

This is the second time Pettas has been named Player of the Week, having received the honors following the Humboldt State game.

Wayne Robinson accumulated 33 defensive points against the Bulldogs to receive Defensive Player of the Week awards. Robinson, a senior speech major, made 11 assist tackles and three tackles for Fresno yardage losses. The defensive end also caused a fumble and recovered one, and had one "great effort." The all-CCAA player from North Fork played tackle as a junior and linebacker as a sophomore and led the Mustangs in '71 in assist tackles with 85.
